

Jerome is the Director General of the International Vaccine Institute, which works to discover, develop and deliver safe effective and affordable vaccines for Global Health. The author of over 250 publications and 11 patents, Dr. Kim is a graduate with high honors and highest honors in History and Biology, respectively, from the University of Hawaii, and received an MD degree from Yale University School of Medicine. He is an adjunct Professor in the Department of Medicine, Uniformed Services University of the Health Sciences, the Graduate School of Public Health, Seoul National University, and Yonsei University.